NEWS AND OTHER ITEMS.

The poor old negro preacher was more than half right when he said, "Bredderin, if we could all see into our own hearts as God does, it would mos' skeer us to death."

A "weight sociable" is the novelty in Red Ribbon, Minn. At supper time the men draw a slip from a box and take to the table the fair one whose name appears on the slip. He pays for the supper at the rate of fifty cents per hundred weight of his partner.

Major Samuel Tinkham, of Anson, has for many years made a specialty of breeding fine wool sheep and has imported many from New York and also direct from Spain. The Major is a successful farmer, and the income of his farm amounted to over four thousand dollars for the year 1879.—Lewiston Journal.

SALE OF AN EASTERN HORSE.—The black stallion "Carrabassett" was sold last week to parties in Philadelphia for five thousand dollars ($5,000.) Carrabassett was raised by Messrs. Townsend & Abbott, formerly of Alexander, Me., and was considered at the time of the sale to be the fastest stallion in Me. His dam was formerly owned by E. M. Marchè, of St. Stephen and his sire was "Norridgewock," owned by H. C. Copeland of Calais. "Norridgewock" belongs to the famous "Knox" family and has produced scores of high priced horses in Calais and vicinity.

We have several times visited the Hereford stock purchased by Mr. Burleigh for himself and Mr. Bodwell, and which still remains in quarantine in the stables of the latter at Hallowell. The animals have greatly improved in appearance since their first arrival, and are now in splendid condition. They have also increased in number, some five or six cows having dropped calves. Visitors from a long distance have come to visit this noble herd, and there will be no trouble in finding purchasers for any animals the owners may be disposed to sell.—Maine Farmer.

HOW AND WHY THE ROOSTER DIED. There is one man in this city, in ward one, who had a chickenpie unintentionally; and this is how it came about. He has a garden, and a boy, and a flock of hens. He prides himself on them in this order: hens, garden, boy. He had put in a few early seeds, and as he came home one day, he saw a large rooster, taking a few steps to jig time, directly over the place where those seeds were planted. He was a strange bird, and evidently a marauder. Our worthy friend, whose temper is equal to that which is said to belong to the celebrated Damascus blade, rushed into the shed, got a gun, and in a few minutes came back with about seven pounds of dead rooster. As he approached the house his son appeared on the scene, and in a horror struck voice yelled out, "Oh, Pa! what did you kill that rooster for? I swapped off that old one of ours for that Plymouth Rock, and now we've got none!" Just what words that parent used, we will not attempt to print, because they would melt the type; but this we will say, that there is one boy in this city who will not trade roosters again, unless he has a power of attorney from his father.—Belfast Journal.

"TIMELY" WARNING.

Beware of those chaps who come about with "rights" for sale, or some implement or affair for which they would make you "sole agent" for the township. A farmer who properly attends to his farm has no time to bother with selling somebody's Mowing Machine Knife Sharpeners or anybody's Patent Spring Bed. Besides this, nearly all the swindles upon farmers, through the medium of notes fraudulently obtained, that have come to our knowledge, would have been avoided, had the farmers refused to have anything to do with matters outside of their proper calling. Being tempted by the idea of making money through the sale of articles of which they knew nothing, they have had to pay notes which they signed while thinking that they put their names to an order for goods. So generally are they swindled, that the farmer's only safety is in refusing to buy any machine, implement, or other article, of any traveling agent whatever. There is nothing needed on the farm that may not be bought of dealers, who have a fixed habitation and can be found when wanted.

Talk is cheap—unless a lawyer does the talking.

—A telegram was received in Colorado a few days since directing the proper authorities to arrest a young man who, it was alleged, had run away with his aunt. "I have an order for your arrest," remarked the officer addressing the supposed criminal.

"For what?"

"You have been running away with your aunt."

"My aunt? Why, she's my wife."

"But wasn't she your aunt before she became your wife? You see we don't tolerate those kinds of goings-on in Colorado."

"I suppose you never were in Utah?" remarked the young man, after he had completed his survey of the detective.

"No."

"Well, as you don't understand the relations of an aunt and nephew in that territory, I suppose I ought to explain them to you, and then, perhaps, you may see your duty plainer. My father married my mother;—"

"I suppose so," interrupted the detective.

"Then he married her sister," continued the stranger, without heeding the interruption. "Then he married the sister of his brother-in-law; then the daughter of this uncle, who was a cousin to his first two wives' husbands; then he married her daughter; and a son of his wife married my sister, who was also a widow of one the other wives' sons. I suppose you are following me?" interjected the narrator.

"Marry your aunt, or your grandmother, either or both of them," exclaimed the listener.

"And you won't arrest me?" queried the young man.

"No; you might be your own father," answered the officer.

STATE NEWS.

Aroostook.

Messrs. Staples, French and Gray, of Houlton, are laying the foundation walls for their new block, corner of Main and Court streets. Mr. Buzzell is raising the frame of his new hotel, 60x90 feet on the ground, four stories high. 150,000 feet of lumber will be required in the building.

Cumberland.

Bark Henry Warner, Capt. Reid, of Portland, arrived at Montivideo, April 5. She reports that on March 28, the second mate, S. J. Montgomery, of Boothbay, was washed off the bowsprit and drowned. The vessel was running under short sail at the time, and there was a heavy sea. No boat could be sent to the rescue of the unfortunate man.

Piscataquis.

Eddie Dexter, of Foxcroft, started for Boston, Tuesday, to enlist in the United States Army.

Rev. J. H. Gurney, a former pastor of the Congregational church of Dover and Foxcroft, is now located in Humboldt, Iowa.

Mrs. Harriet Burrill, another old resident of Dover, died on Sunday last. Her age was 64 years and she had lived there for 55 years.

Waldo.

A dwelling house belonging to the heirs of Mrs. Ann C. Hatch, of Islesboro, was destroyed by fire Monday night. There was a family in the main body of the house, and the ell part was occupied by Mr. Hobart Dodge as a store. Mr. Dodge lost everything, as he boarded some distance away. The family escaped in their night clothes. It was probably the work of an incendiary, as the store was burned first, and there hadn't been any fire in the store Tuesday night. The dwelling house and barn and outbuildings of Capt. Shubael Pendleton were destroyed by fire.

Chas. W. Mayo, who resided at the corner of Cedar and Pearl streets, Belfast, was found dead in his house on Monday morning. Mr. Mayo, who has no family except his wife, was alone in the house, his wife being in attendance on a sick relative. He went home early on the previous evening, and was seen by the neighbors to enter the house. Next morning the other occupants of the house noticed that Mr. Mayo's dog was barking, and that no one was seen or heard about his premises. A boy who was put in at the window, said there was some one lying in the entry. Mr. A. C. Burgess, a near neighbor, was called, who entered the house, and found Mr. Mayo lying at the foot of the stairs dead, apparently just as he had fallen. The outer door was not locked, and an orange lay upon the floor. Deceased was a native of Monroe, son of Timothy Mayo, Esq. For the past seven months he had been bookkeeper with Morison & Co., having for many years previously acted in a like capacity for Treat & Co., of Frankfort. He was a quiet, unassuming man, much respected.

John Edmunds, formerly turnkey at the Belfast jail, has bought the Dudley Crain farm, at East Montville, which he will carry on.

The house belonging to the Orrington Methodist Society, destroyed by fire at the Northport camp ground last fall, will be replaced at once by a larger one.

Carlton Rowell, of Centre Montville, hung himself in his barn on Wednesday of last week, by tying a rope to his neck, attaching it to a beam, and then sliding off the hay mow. Rowell has for some time had symptoms of insanity, professing to hold communications with spirits; and on this occasion said they had commanded him to hang himself. He was over 80 years of age. At the time nobody was about the premises except his wife.

The body of Mrs. Margaret Wing, widow of the late Levi Wing, formerly one of the publishers of the Journal, arrived at Belfast by steamer on Saturday. She died suddenly in Boston.

Bark Sarah L. Staples is now lying at Swan & Sibley's wharf, Belfast, preparing to be stripped for repairs. Her main and mizzen masts will come out, new wants and bulwarks put on, she will have new keelson and be generally overhauled; she will also have some new spars.

Washington.

At the annual meeting of the Eastport Savings Bank the old board of officers were reelected, and the examination showed the affairs of the bank to be in a satisfactory and prosperous condition. The deposits and reserve fund of this bank now amount to over $150,000.

Messrs. G. F. Wadsworth and Geo. H. Robbins, have been designated as census enumerators for Eastport.

The Frontier Guards, of Eastport, will be inspected and mustered in some time this week or next.

A Republican State Convention

WILL BE HELD IN

GRANITE HALL, AUGUSTA,

Wednesday, June 23, 1880

At 11 o'clock A. M.

for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Governor to be supported at the September election and two candidates for Electors of President and Vice President of the United States and to transact any other business that may properly come before the Convention

The basis of representation will be as follows Each city, town and plantation will be entitled to one delegate and for every seventy five votes cast for the Republican candidate for Governor in 1879 an additional delegate and a fraction of forty votes in excess of seventy five will be accorded a delegate

The State Committee will be in session on in the anti-room of the Hall at 9 o clock on the morning of the Convention to receive the credentials of delegates

For the first time in the history of Maine the attempt was made in 1879 to deprive the people of the right to choose their own officers and to corruptly continue in power those whom the people had rejected The authors, abettors and accomplices in this crime against free government are now seeking to come before the people under some new party name—crawling themselves of shams the common resort of those who seek to escape the responsibility and punishment of their crimes

Against these men under whatever name they may appear, all those citizens who condemn the nefarious plot to destroy the rights of suffrage, are invited to unite without regard to past party affiliations, to preserve honest Government for the honest people of Maine

By order of the Republican State Committee

C A BOUTELLE, FRED'K DOW, GEORGE C WING, } Sub-Committee.

J O SMITH, Secretary

THE WAY OF THE TRANSGRESSOR

Our readers will remember that on the second of February last, the report came by telegraph that Israel Boothby the cashier of the First National Bank of Augusta and committed suicide, being found dead in the cistern in the basement of the bank building with a pistol shot through his brain. The sequel to that story came to our readers some ten days ago in the telegram announcing that the miserable man who was found to be a defaulter in the sum of $30 000. It was no surprise to those who knew the man and his habits Although of kindly nature and genial disposition, he was a libertine a gambler, and given to his cups Why was a man of that character kept in such a responsible position? The answer always came—Major Boothby is a model accountant his books are always right, whatever he may be in other respects, he certainly is an honest man He was held up as a man who despised churches, revivals of religion temperance and morality, but was able to maintain the integrity of his business relations How soon the delusion has been dispelled! The Maine Farmer has a notable article on the subject reviewing the whole case Although surrounded by a board of directors composed of careful and competent business men Boothby carried on for eight years the operations of an embezzler This bank was carefully examined once a year by Hon Joseph H Williams and once a year by the National Bank Examiner who a portion of the time was Hon Noah Woods of Bangor, now Judge Humphrey of the same city At each examination these gentlemen found the accounts of the bank correct as per the books The examinations though critically made by Mr Wood and Judge Humphrey, would not reveal the amount of funds in other banks so skilfully had Boothby place false entries upon his books

In this case Mr Williams on the first day of last February commenced his annual examination of the bank Mr Booth by had fixed his books making them conform to the then condition of the bank In his attempts to conceal his crime he left the trace which led to his being discovered and to his death Mr Williams discovered that the cash was $10 00 short there being a false entry of unpaid dividends for this amount He notified Mr Boothby and said to him that he must account for this on the morrow Tuesday morning came Mr Boothby knew exposure was inevitable—he knew that the penalty must be paid for the life of crime he had led, and in the building where he had violated his trusts and betrayed those who had placed in him implicit faith broken down by fear and remorse, not having the courage to face the responsibilities of his own acts he took his life and his death was his confession

For three months Mr Williams has been examining the large business transactions of this bank with all its depositors and customers and other banks in Boston and New York from the time Mr Boothby became its cashier until his death The examination has been most exhaustive and thorough and it shows a defalcation commencing eight years ago and continuing until his death of thirty one thousand dollars Two ring false entries, forgeries and theft which required the practice of the most subtle ingenuity and persistent wrong doing

Of the loss incurred the bank will lose six thousand dollars which can be paid for out of its surplus fund and its standing will not be affected Mr Boothby's estate is three thousand dollars The sureties on his bond twenty-two thousand dollars During the period of his defalcation he gave two bonds of twenty thousand dollars each, while the first bond was running there was a defalcation of two thousand dollars The sureties upon this bond we learn are Hon S E Spring of Portland, Col Thos Lambard Messrs J P Wyman and Geo M Robinson of Augusta Upon the other bond which covers a period where the defalcation was thirty thousand dollars, of which the bond is held for twenty thousand, the sureties we understand are Hon S E Spring of Portland Hon Artemas Libbey, Messrs Orrin Whitmanson and J P Wyman of Augusta, and Mr W M Thayer of Bangor Some of these gentlemen are men of wealth but others can ill afford to bear their portion of the loss

General John C Beatty, who is one of Ohio delegates to Chicago tells a reporter of the Philadelphia Press that to his opinion Blaine will receive from that delegation nine votes on the first ballot, fifteen on the second and a majority on the third He considers Blaine the first choice of Ohio Republicans and thinks the contest will be between Grant and Blaine. The opposition to a third term he, in common with every other observer, believes has increased wonderfully of late. If Blaine is nominated, he adds, Ohio will go Republican by a large majority.

THE GAME OF DESPERATION

The political malignants, like the Bangor Commercial, which so eagerly profess to see disaster to Mr Blaine and success for the third term in the high handed proceeding by which Senator Logan has secured a notoriously unwarranted endorsement of Grant's candidacy by a manufactured hair breadth majority in a State Convention, only expose their irrepressible desire for the renomination of the ex-President

As a matter of fact the sort of "victory" won by Senator Logan for Gen Grant, would prove fatal to any candidate. No National Republican Convention would nominate any man whose support was secured by such means, and in spite of all the boasting of the desperate men who are seeking to strangle free choice in the Republican Party Gen Grant is still far short of a nomination on the first ballot and his support can never be increased

With eighteen rightfully chosen delegates from his own State demanding their right of admission to vote against him in the National Convention Gen Grant's candidacy is discredited at the start and the fact that nearly all his support comes from Democratic localities is enough to put his nomination out of the question

The manifest fact is that Senator Blaine is the choice of the people of the Republican Party as he was four years ago and his name will go into the National Convention with a strength that will be irresistible

The delegation from Maine to the National Convention, with Senator Blaine at its head will arrive by special train from Portland the Monday morning preceding the convention and the delegates will at once proceed to take possession of their quarters at the Matteson House and open a Blaine bureau.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

In its insane championship of the third term the Inter Ocean has become the most unscrupulous liar on our exchange list Senator Blaine is not going to Chicago the special train will not arrive Monday but on Saturday and the headquarters of the Maine delegation will not be opened at the Matteson House but at the Grand Pacific Hotel In other words there is not a grain of truth in any part of the Inter Ocean malicious paragraph

The Boston Transcript's Washington correspondent says John B. Gordon, of Georgia has resigned from the U S Senate to run for Vice President on the ticket with Tilden in the belief that the latter would not live out half his term

F M Fogg, the clown of the Garcelon Council of Tribulators, nominated for Congress What a morsel for the Democrats of the Second District to roll under their tongues

Dental authorities estimate that half a ton of pure gold is used every year in filling teeth in this country, costing half a million dollars, besides about four times as much cheaper material, as silver and platina worth $100 000 more Then there are made every year about 3,000 000 artificial teeth mounted on gold plating or rubber This indicates that as a people we take pretty good care of the teeth, yet the dentists say that not half the people who need it avail themselves of their services

THE PASSION PLAY

Cable despatches give a description of the noted Passion Play, now being performed at Ober Ammergau, Germany, before audiences numbering eight or ten thousand, including hundreds of Americans One despatch says

Last evening the most exciting struggles took place around the various ticket booths in the effort to secure seats. The scene in the little village was exceedingly animated, the inhabitants having done all in their power to make it as attractive as possible What with the firing of cannon and the parading of bands of music through the streets the picture presented was a fairly brilliant one The behavior of the audience during the performance was admirable. From first to last, as the different tableaux were presented, the most intense feelings of devotion and reverence were exhibited. The scenery is perfect, but the costumes are poor. The part of the Saviour was exceptionally well played. Very little can be said in praise of the women actresses, their parts being given in the most indifferent manner. Two attempts at applause were made, but the demonstration was promptly suppressed. The performance commenced at eight o'clock in the morning and was finished at five in the afternoon Shortly after the commencement of the second part in the afternoon a terrific thunder storm burst over the village Rain fell at intervals, but the actors bravely held out and there was no interruption except for a brief period of ten minutes

In the scene where the Saviour is represented carrying the cross, the spectacular effect was very fine The procession was specially magnificent owing to the introduction of new and correct costumes in the uniforming of the Roman soldiers In the part of Judas Iscariot the acting was very fine Some laughter was caused by the accidental breaking of a limb when he was about to hang himself The most impressive and terribly realistic scene of all however, was the crucifixion, which caused a most painful and profound impression throughout the entire audience This interest in the play was maintained to the very end, scarcely one of the vast number present having moved from his seat until the performance closed Altogether the performance is far more perfect and the play is infinitely better mounted than in any time in the past The villagers, however are becoming spoiled by the commercial spirit and have lost a good deal of their old time simplicity

The seventh act—the Garden of Gethsemane—is powerful in its simplicity We have a vivid representation of the agony in the garden and the subsequent exhibition of strength and majesty when the conflict is over The Saviour then returns to the three disciples who are with Him and finding them still asleep greets them with [illegible] to them, incomprehensible words Sleep on and take your rest Behold mine approaches the din of arms is heard in the distance and anon Roman soldiers appear led by Judas who steps up to Jesus who is surrounded by his disciples and exclaiming "O Rabbi be thou greeted my dear master," Jesus answers calmly Wherefore O friend art thou come? Judas Judas thou betrayest the Son of Man with a kiss In this and the subsequent scene, wherein Christ restrains His disciples, who would rescue the soldiers and wherein He heals the ear of Malchus wounded by Philip, the acting of the Master is simply majestic It is scarcely possible to describe in words the powerful effect produced by these scenes upon the audience The soldiers and rabble have scarcely quitted the scene before the disciples Peter and John emerge from where they have been concealed during their Master's capture Alas exclaims Peter they have now taken Him away—our friend our beloved Teacher! I cannot comprehend what has taken place! Overcome with emotion he buries his face in the bosom of his companion and weeps

MAINE NEWS.

Congressman in First District.

CONFERENCE OF REPUBLICANS.

BIDDEFORD, May 21. A committee of Republicans, consisting of one man from each town in the county, met here to-day to decide whether a man from York county should be presented to the Republican District Convention to contest with Hon. Thos. B. Reed for the nomination for Congress from this district. Among the prominent Republicans present were Col. Mark F. Wentworth, Col. James M. Stone, Hon. Jere Mason, Senator Geo. H. Wakefield, Hon. Chas. H. Moses and B. B. Hamilton, Esq. It was voted 14 to 13, to present a candidate from York county. The most prominent is Jere Mason. The name of Col. James M. Stone is also mentioned.

THE FIFTH DISTRICT.

Rockland Delegates for Gen. Tilson.

ROCKLAND, May 21. A large Republican caucus this evening elected twelve delegates and twelve alternates to the Congressional Convention in the Fifth District. Judge Hall presented resolutions denying the validity of the assertion that Waldo had the right to name the candidate. He claimed that the candidate belonged to Knox, by usage. He also presented the name of Gen. Davis Tilson as the choice of the Rockland delegates, which was unanimously adopted amid great enthusiasm. The delegation is composed of the prominent men of Rockland.

TERRIFIC THUNDER SHOWER IN OXFORD COUNTY.

Several Houses Struck by Lightning and Burned.

NORWAY, May 21. The dwelling of John Colledge, in Canton, was burned by lightning last night. He lost farming tools, hay, carriages, two horses, one hog, seven pigs and furniture. Insured for $1,200. At the same time the dwelling of Dana Bradford, of Canton, was struck and badly shattered. Insured for $3,000. The dwelling of Frank M. Hacker, in Canton, was also burned by lightning. Insured for $1,000. No one was killed or injured. The lightning struck many other places. There was a terrific shower all over Oxford County.

Ordained, Notwithstanding his Belief.

BIDDEFORD, May 21. Rev. George A. Lockwood, whom a Ecclesiastical Council a year ago refused to ordain as pastor of the Congregational church in Kennebunk, because of his belief in a "conditional, immortality" was on Thursday installed over the same church by a Council called to consider his case, Mr. Lockwood still holding to his former belief in the doctrine of conditional immortality. The vote to install stood 16 to 7.

Killed at his Work.

LEWISTON, May 21. Seth Kelley, a scythe grinder, employed by Emerson, Stevens & Co., of West Waterville, was instantly killed this forenoon by the bursting of a stone.

Found Dead in the River.

RICHMOND, May 21. The remains of Mrs. Pamelia Toothaker, who suddenly disappeared in October last, were found to-day in the river at Dresden. She was thought to be deranged and probably committed suicide.

Struck by Lightning.

LEWISTON, May 21. Last evening the buildings of Frank Hacker at Canton were burned by lightning; insured for $1200. John Coolidge, of Canton, also lost his house, barn and entire stock of horses, cattle and sheep.

Barn Struck by Lightning—Two Cows Killed.

PORTLAND, May 21. The barn of Eli Noble, at West Baldwin, was struck by lightning on Thursday night, slightly damaging it, and killing two cows.

FORTY-SIXTH CONGRESS—Second Session.

Senate.

WASHINGTON, May 21.

The House bill making appropriation for the payment of claims reported allowed by the Commissioners of Claims, was placed on the calendar to be called up as soon as possible.

Mr. Bayard's Deputy Marshals' bill was taken up. Mr. Hoar moved to strike out the words, "in equal numbers from different political parties," and insert the words "solely with reference to their fitness for their duties without regard to political opinions." The amendment was rejected, and a motion to add a proviso that marshals for whom deputies shall be appointed by the Court shall not be liable for any of the acts of such deputies, was agreed to. Mr. Edmunds said this amendment illustrated the meaning of the bill, namely: either to have no special deputies appointed at all, or to have them appointed beyond the control of the Executive officers, and to have their acts uncontrolled.

The bill then passed by a party vote. The word "special" was expunged from the title.

The Legislative Appropriation bill was taken up.

House.

A motion by Mr. Hooker to consider the Choctaw bill Wednesday night, with the Ute ratification bill, was defeated, and Mr. Hooker intimated that there will be a sweet time in getting the Ute bill through, stating that its proposed consideration was in violation of an understanding between himself and those interested in the Ute bill.

The bill to furnish a bronze statue of General Daniel Morgan to Cowpens Centennial was passed.

The bill making appropriation for the payment of certain claims, reported allowed by the accounting officers of the Treasury was passed.

The bill for the relief of Defrees, the Public Printer, was passed.

A resolution calling for information in regard to the expulsion of Israelites, citizens of the United States, from St. Petersburg, was adopted.

The House proceeded to the consideration of bills relative to public lands. The various bills agreed to in Committee of the Whole were passed by the House and the Speaker proceeded to call for reports of a private nature.

The resolution in the contested election case, Duffy vs. Mason, from the 29th District of New York, declaring Mason, the sitting member, entitled to a seat, was adopted.

MARINE DISASTERS.

HALIFAX, May 21. The schooner Dolphin, at Sheet Harbor on the 18th from Newfoundland, reports immense fields of ice from the west coast of Newfoundland to Cape Canso. Nearly one hundred vessels are delayed in getting up North Bay. Two large Norwegian barques were lost near Rose Blanche, Newfoundland. Their crews were saved. It is supposed that many more vessels are lost.

Heavy Concerns Suspend Payments.

PHILADELPHIA, May 21. President Gowen makes the following announcement: The Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Co., and Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Co., have been compelled to suspend payments. The managers will take immediate measures to protect intact the property of both companies and continue business. For this purpose the daily revenues will be applied so far as required to the payment of wages and supplies.

Bulldozed Illinois.

The Game Played Out

Nine Congressional Districts Disfranchised.

Eighteen Delegates to Protest at Chicago.

Reassembled.

SPRINGFIELD, May 21. The Convention reassembled at 9 o'clock this morning. The committee reported a list of delegates, the following being those at large: Senator Logan, Emery A. Storrs, G. B. Rahm and D. J. Littler.

The Grab Game.

Amid much confusion and loud protests from the anti-Grant men the roll was called on the main question. The Blaine men refused to vote. The main question was carried and the list of delegates was adopted. The Committee on Delegates was instructed to report to this convention two electors at large and one elector for each Congressional district.

A Fine Sarcasm.

Gen. Logan offered the following, which was adopted:

Resolved, That Gen. U. S. Grant is the choice of the Republican party of Illinois for the Presidency and the delegates from this State are instructed to use all honorable means to secure his nomination by the Chicago Convention and to vote for him as a unit.

The chairman of the convention was instructed to telegraph to Grant that Illinois stands by him with 42 votes for President.

A Protest.

The delegates of the 17th District filed a protest against the action of the convention in selecting delegates other than those elected in the District Convention.

Logan suggested the following as the only platform to be adopted:

Resolved, That the Republicans of Illinois declare that they will support the nominees of this convention for State officers, and the nominees of Chicago for President and Vice President.

This was passed with much enthusiasm.

Nine Congressional Districts Protest.

Eight other congressional districts stated that their districts united in the protest of the 17th district.

Gov. Cullom was renominated.

John M. Hamilton was nominated for Lieut. Governor; Henry D. Dement, Secretary of State; Charles P. Swigart, Auditor of Public Accounts; Edward Rutz, State Treasurer; James McCartney, Attorney General.

A resolution of thanks to the Chairman, Gen. Raum, was adopted and at 4 o'clock the convention adjourned.

The Chicago Journal Strongly Condemns the Proceedings.

CHICAGO, May 21. The Evening Journal editorially comments as follows on the Springfield Convention: The convention at the dictation of Logan, not only declared Grant the choice of a majority for President, (a very proper resolution under the circumstances), but also agreed to practically disfranchise eight of the Congressional districts of the State, which was the grossest outrage of the entire proceedings, and ought not to have been endured. An appeal lought and will be taken to the National Convention. The worst has not yet come. The storm at Springfield was by no means a clearing up shower. The intolerance, unfairness and lawlessness of the bull-dozers has intensified the hostility.

The Chicago Tribune's Springfield special states that ten of the Congressional districts have entered their protests against the doings of the Convention. They will appeal to the National Convention.

POLITICAL.

The Iowa Greenbackers.

DES MOINES, May 21. The Greenback State Convention reassembled Thursday. Seventy-four counties out of ninety-nine were partially represented. The resolution requesting the delegates to the Chicago convention to support J. B. Weaver as the Greenback nominee for President were received with disappointment, till it was explained that the resolution was not tantamount to an instruction. Then it was passed. The delegates at large are D. P. Stubbs and A. M. Dawley.

Alabama Convention.

SELMA, May 21. The State convention to-day, by a vote of 113 to 33, passed a resolution instructing the delegates to Chicago to cast the whole vote of the State for Grant. The proceedings of the convention was stormy.

California Democratic Convention.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 21. The Democratic State Convention this morning elected delegates to the Cincinnati delegation uninstructed, but directed to vote as a unit. The preferences are: Tilden, 8; Thurman, 2; Seymour, 1; Field, 1.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Accident to the Pullman Train.

BOSTON, May 21. The night Pullman train from Bangor for this city on the Eastern Railroad was partly derailed at Somerville, Mass., this morning. The engine and an express car were thrown from the track, badly damaging the engine. The accident was caused by the axle of the forward truck of the engine breaking. Fortunately no one was hurt. The in trains were delayed, but the out trains left on time.

THE MOTHER'S TESTIMONY. My little girl has been out of health for some time, and grew very much worse as warm weather approached. Nothing I could get would tempt her appetite, and I felt very much concerned about her. After trying various remedies with no avail, I procured a bottle of People's Favorite Tonic Bitters, and contrary to my expectations she is fast regaining her health. I cannot praise this remedy too highly.

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING. Our Dover correspondent writes: A heavy thunder shower passed over this vicinity Thursday afternoon, about six o'clock. The lightning shattered a chimney on the house of C. A. Everett, in Dover, and also struck the stable of J. G. Mayo and the spool factory in Foxcroft, besides several trees. No serious damage was done, however. A little later another shower occurred but I hear of no damage being done.

BOSTON MUSEUM COMPANY. The sale of reserved seats for the Boston Museum Company on Wednesday evening next, will commence at Begbee's this morning. As we have before remarked, the company is a very strong one, and an exceptionally fine performance may be expected. GARLAND ITEMS. Our correspondent writes: Thursday evening a succession of showers passed over this village, accompanied by some wind and hail. The lightning was very sharp and frequent and struck in many places. A large juniper near the widow Millett's house was literally torn to pieces and scattered about. A fir tree standing within eight feet of the River Side House was struck. The lightning passed down the trunk to the ground and then entered the cellar of the house, doing but little damage, however.

A PLEASING ENTERTAINMENT. On Thursday evening the temperance drama "The Little Brown Jug" was excellently performed by an amateur company at Winn. ATTEMPT TO BREAK JAIL. Oscar S. Larrabee, who is now serving out a six months' sentence in the Belfast jail for assault and battery upon his father, made an attempt to escape a few days since. He got hold of an old cross-cut saw and made it into a saw and with this tool he succeeded in sawing off one end of an iron grating in one of the windows. He then with the aid of another prisoner pried away the grating with an iron bar taken from the stairs of the jail, making a hole through which he could no doubt have got out. As the prisoners are not locked in their cells until evening it is supposed that Larrabee intended to make his escape that Sunday about dusk, but Sheriff Baker discovered his plans, and has since kept him confined in a cell. Larrabee is a desperate fellow and once succeeded in breaking jail a few years since. He has served a term of two years in the State prison where he was considered a dangerous man. There have been several attempts, some of them successful, to escape from the same window that Larrabee planned to get out of.—Age.

FOR THE LADIES. Very pretty coquettish costumes, suitable for country and morning wear, will be made this season of gingham handkerchiefs. For instance, the tunic may be made of blue handkerchiefs, bordered round with a pink hem. The underskirt is of plain gingham, trimmed with colored plaitings; the tunic is open on one side, to show the whole length of the underskirt, and is then prettily puffed in the back. The bodice is a plaited jacket, with a border of one handkerchief for a belt. The large collar is of the sailor shape, and is of the same color as the border, as are also the cuffs. The parasol to be used with this dress must be of the same material as the dress itself. The hat is of white straw and is trimmed with flowers to match the colors in the dress. The genuine Chinese crapes, like those in Canton crape shawls, are brought out in all colors to combine with silk or satin for dressy costumes for spring wear. They appear in the patterns that can only be used for choice occasions, such as rose, Isabelle, cream, pale blue, and in the darker heliotrope and coachman's drab. Soft figured silks to combine with these crapes have very quaintly-contrasting colors arranged in the design. Thus, cream-color will have Japanese blue and bronze figures, a sky-blue ground will have brown an ecru figures, and old-gold will be strewn with pale blue.

THE LATE WILLIAM C. CROSBY.

Resolutions of Respect and Eulogies by the Penobscot Bar.

The members of the Penobscot Bar assembled in the Court Room yesterday and unanimously passed the following resolutions:

RESOLUTIONS.

May it please the Court:

The members of the Penobscot Bar have deputed Bros. Clark, Varney and myself, to communicate to the Court the sorrowful intelligence of the death of William C. Crosby, who calmly passed away on the twenty-first day of February last, at his residence on Fifth street, and to present to the Court, resolves expressive of the high estimation in which he was held by its members. The Committee have, accordingly, prepared a series of resolves for that purpose, and I now have the honor as their organ, and the organ of the Bar, to present them to the Court:

Resolved, That we have learned with deep regret the death of William C. Crosby, who for many years was a prominent and honorable member of this Bar, and that we cannot permit the sad event to pass without an expression of the high appreciation in which he was held by the members of the Bar, for his many noble qualities and virtues.

Resolved, That we have noticed in him great aptness for his profession, a mind acute and discriminating, and that while he was vigilant and patient in the investigation and preparation of his cases, his vigorous and logical mind enabled him to look beyond mere precedents, and scrutinize the principles on which the cases were decided. That in presenting his arguments to the Court and Jury, he was clear, methodical and forcible; that he was a safe and judicious Counsellor, and that in his professional intercourse with the members of the Bar, he was courteous and dignified.

Resolved, That in the management of public affairs, his organizing mind made him conspicuous, that his marked individuality never degenerated into vain egotism, nor his independence in thought, and firmness of purpose, into offensive obstinacy; that as a public functionary he was indefatigable, and conscientious in the discharge of his duties, letting no personal or private interests bias his judgment, and was, in all respects, a model officer. In his social intercourse, he was pleasant and agreeable, in his domestic relations, he was kind and affectionate, and as a citizen, he was respected and honored for his integrity, and the spotless purity of his character.

Resolved, That the members of the Bar tender to the bereaved widow and family of the deceased, their condolence and sympathy, and that a copy of these resolutions be transmitted to them.

REMARKS OF ABRAHAM SANBORNE, ESQ.

May it please your Honor:

I need not say that the sentiments of respect towards our deceased brother, so fully expressed in the resolutions just reported, meet with my entire concurrence and approbation.

You and I knew him in his early days, at his youthful home, in the house and on the farm of his father, the late Oliver Crosby, Esq., of Atkinson, Maine. His father had been an able lawyer among the distinguished members of the Bar of the State of New Hampshire. His mansion on his farm, to which he retired from his professional labors, was the dignified abode of himself and family, where intelligence, culture, refinement, affection, love and every virtue dwelt and reigned. He was, in one word, a gentleman, indeed, "in whom there was no guile."

No higher eulogy need be pronounced upon our deceased brother than to add, that he proved himself the worthy son of such a father, preserving and transmitting unsullied the fair name which he had so richly inherited.

This scene, may it please your Honor, will not be acted over but a few more times, when you and I and others now present shall be permitted to have any part in it. Its every repetition reminds us that our turn may come next—that we must soon follow in the footsteps of our brethren who have gone before us down into the dark valley of the shadow of death," of McGaw, and Godfrey, and Abbot, and Hathaway, and Rogers, and Cutting, and Kent. It is but a few, brief years since, in the fullness of their strength, they sat in these seats, their voices filled this hall and their powers were exerted in defence of right, and justice, and law. Though they are dead they still live, they live in our memories, they live in our Judicial reports of the decisions of this Court which they have illustrated, illuminated and enriched by their learning and thought, and, thank God, we believe they live in the realms of unlimited space which spread out beyond that "dark valley," where there is no more night and no death, but eternal day and everlasting life.

May we be ready to join them "with unfaltering trust," and with "faith that casteth out all fear," when our last summons shall come.

I move your Honor that the resolutions be entered on the files of the Court and a copy be presented to his bereaved wife and family.

REMARKS OF CHIEF JUSTICE APPLETON.

I fully concur in the remarks which have been made as well as in the resolutions of the Bar. They are a just and appropriate tribute to the memory of our departed brother.

I have known Mr. Crosby from the time I first commenced the practice of law in this State, and during all that time our relations have been the most friendly and cordial. He did not have the advantages of a collegiate education, but his fondness for books and reading was such that he was more than usually well informed on all topics and well acquainted with the literature of the day.

Notwithstanding he commenced the study of law somewhat late in life, he made himself a master of its principles. An acute and accurate lawyer, he was ever faithful to the interests of his clients. His investigation of their causes was painstaking and thorough. He was careful and cautious in the giving of advice—prudent in the institution of suits and persevering in their prosecution. Neither time, nor labor, nor ability were wanting. Honorable and upright in all the relations of life, public and private, his integrity was above suspicion or reproach. Kind and affectionate, to his friends and family, they know well his home virtues and will deeply feel his loss.

Few are better prepared to meet the inevitable hour, which must come alike to all. The labors of life accomplished, its duties well performed, he sank quietly to rest—the sleep of nature ending in the repose of death.

Let the resolutions of the Bar be entered of record and in token of respect the Court will stand adjourned.

THE MAGNITUDE OF MAN. Take a globe 7 feet in diameter with a surface smooth as glass, let this represent the world, then place thereon one grain of sand 1-20 of one inch in thickness, and this grain of sand will bear the same proportion to the aforesaid globe that the highest mountain in the world bears to the earth's surface. This statement is made on good authority. Now we propose to do a little more figuring in order to show what an enormous creature man must be, as seen striding up and down the earth. One of the loftiest peaks of the Andes rises to a hight of about 25,000 feet. Place a box of Seabold's Harness Soap on its summit, and let us suppose it possible for a sufficient number of men to stand one upon another's head, so that the uppermost man shall be at an elevation that would enable him to stretch forth his hand and secure the prize, we can afford to be liberal, and will allow 6 feet to a man, 25,000 divided by 6 gives 4166. Shades of Leibnitz! more than 4000 of such men are required to attain an altitude of 1 20 of one inch. Where is the microscope with the aid of which one of these little specs of humanity could be discovered? Some of these atoms are very influential and are known as great men. Others aspire to eminence, but their ladder often proves too short. Each is supposed to be engaged in something that concerns himself, but here and there a person is found attending to matters that are exclusively his neighbor's. All, without a single exception, from King to Peasant, put in their time for their "board and clothes" and it is of no kind of use to strike for higher wages. The rate is fixed and is unchangeable. It is very fortunate for the manufacturers of that famous leather dressing, "Stoddard's Harness Soap," that millions of these people keep horses, use harnesses, boots and shoes; and it is equally fortunate for the people that such a first class preparation can be procured from all respectable dealers throughout the land. may22 d7t&w1w

DOUBLE SUFFERERS.

If the thousands that now have their rest and comfort destroyed by complication of Liver and Kidney complaints would give nature's remedy, Kidney-Wort, a trial, they would be speedily cured. ELOISE'S INHERITANCE.

It was a bitter night in November, a promise of a cold, dreary winter to come, when two gentlemen, some thirty-eight or forty years old, sat over wine and cigars in a luxurious room, in an up-town boarding house, in New York City. One, the youngest of the couple, had landed a few hours before, from a European steamer, and had been telling travelers' tales to his companion, far into the night hours.

"Right?" he said, in answer to a question. "No, but little richer than when I left here. But I have gained experience and knowledge in my Paris life. There is nothing like the French schools and hospitals for a doctor. Bert, I would not take thousands of dollars and miss the last few years."

"But you are glad to come home, Cyrus?"

"Home" said Cyrus Worthington, with a short, bitter laugh. "this is my home, a room in a boarding house, and I chose this because you were here, my old friend and chum."

"But your relatives?"

"I do not know of one. Dr. Worthington took me from a charity school when I was six years old, because I had a curious variation of scarlet fever he wished to study out at leisure. I was an odd child, smart and active, and before the fever was cured he became fond of me, and adopted me. We must have been a strange pair, Bert, the old bachelor wrapped up in his profession, and the elfish, half-starved foundling. But we were very happy. Until I went to Harvard, where we met, Bert, my benefactor educated me himself, and I devoured books. I had no one to love, and books filled the craving of my heart, so I studied everything before me, including the medical works in the library. You won't believe me, I suppose, M'Ibell you I could use a dissecting knife before I was twelve years old?"

"I do not doubt it. We all considered you a prodigy of learning at Harvard. By the way, how did you ever come to leave the doctor for college?"

"He desired it, distrusting his own powers of tuition after I passed seventeen. When I came home, as you know, I became his partner and assistant until he died, leaving me $30,000, and I fulfilled my lifelong desire and went to Paris."

"Was that all that drove you to Paris? No love dream, no fair companion on the steamer?"

"None. I am heart whole at thirty-eight. Can you say as much?"

"Not I. My heart is as full of holes from Cupid's darts as a skimmer. My last love, though, is the sweetest maiden that ever won a heart, with soft eyes and golden curls. You shall see her. In your travels you have seen no fairer face than Eloise Hunter's."

Over Cyrus Worthington's face came a startled look that was almost terror.

"Eloise Hunter," he cried; then added, with a forced carelessness, "it is a pretty name. Who is she?"

"The daughter of our landlady. Did I not mention her name when I wrote you I had secured rooms for you here?"

"No."

"Well, her name is Hunter. She is the widow of one Daniel Hunter, who died leaving her without a dollar, having squandered her fortune as well as his own. Not a bad man, I judge, but one who was wickedly reckless in using money. Well, he is dead now, and his widow keeps this house."

"And this daughter—how old is she?"

"Nineteen or twenty, I should judge. She is so little and fair she looks like a child. You like tried, Cyrus."

"Very tired."

"You are pale as death. I will leave you to rest. Pleasant dreams."

Pale as death, and with his large, dark eyes full of startled light, Cyrus Worthington paced the floor after his friend had retired.

"It is fate!" he muttered. "Destiny. What accident could throw that girl across my path three hours after landing in New York. Eloise, only daughter of Daniel Hunter! It makes me dizzy to think. If, after all, I am to grasp what I have coveted for years! Patience! patience!"

He paced the room for hours, till the gray dawn crept in at the window, when he threw himself on his bed for a few hours of repose. A man of iron will, of steady nerve, he had been assailed by the strongest, fiercest temptation of his life, and awakened only to renew the mental conflict.

A late breakfast was presided over by a pale woman about forty, his landlady, but there was no sign yet of Eloise. Feverishly desirous to see her to form some estimate of her from his own observations, Cyrus Worthington lingered in the house all day.

He was a man who once having resolved upon any course of action could not be turned aside by trivial or by weighty opinion, and he had resolved to marry Eloise Hunter, never having seen her face or heard her voice. So with this purpose in his heart, he threw all other considerations to the wind, and waited to make the first move in this game of life, for two.

Educated, as he had said himself, by a man whose soul was wrapped up in his profession, the scholar had absorbed much of his teacher's enthusiasm. But while Dr. Worthington looked steadily at the nobler aims of his profession, the power to alleviate suffering, to aid mankind, Cyrus loved it for its more abstruse investigations, its scientific scope, its broad field for self-aggrandizement. To make a name in the medical and scientific world, by some new work of value, to be known as the great Dr. Worthington, was the end of all his study and research. But his ambition was second to his avarice. Not for money itself, but for the free control of the luxuries money will procure, he longed for great wealth; not merely comfort, that his own income secured, but riches, power to live in a palace with a score of servants, with luxury in every appointment, and money to spend freely in the pursuit of those scientific studies for which he had an earnest love, and from which he derived all his dreams of fame.

A man in perfect health, who had never injured an iron constitution by any excess, or hard, keen intellect and strong will, he was a dangerous wooer for fair Eloise Hunter, a lily in her fair, sweet beauty, with a delicate constitution, timid to a fault, and modest as a violet.

He was in the drawing-room in the afternoon, reading a novel, half hidden by the folds of a curtain, when he saw a lady coming across the soft carpet, who he felt sure must be Eloise Hunter. Small as a child of fourteen, exquisitely fair, with a wealth of golden curls caught from a low, broad brow, a sweet, childlike mouth, and purely oval face, she was as lovely a vision of girlhood as ever man's eyes rested upon.

"How weak, timid, easily influenced!"

Not one thought of the wrong he was to do her dawning womanhood troubled him. Whatever scruples of conscience had troubled his night's vigils were all crushed under the iron heel of his will, and these was no thought now of turning back from his purpose. While his eyes still rested upon her face, Eloise opened the piano, and from the little taper fingers flowed the music that comes only by divine gift, the outpouring of inspiration. It moved even Cyrus Worthington, no mean judge of the wondrous execution of the girl's fingers, of the power of her genius. From a heart full of sadness came wailing melodies, melting into dying cadences, full of tearful meaning, then slowly there gathered on the sweet lips an intense smile of wondrous radiance, and the minor passages were changed to tender, rippling airs, happy as an infant's smile, till some glorious chords of grand harmony completed this true maiden's dream.

It was evidently holiday work, for with a sigh Eloise took a book of alarm-looking exercises from the music rack, and began to practice in real earnest.

Cyrus Worthington drew further back in the folds of the curtain, and resumed his novel. An hour flew by and then Mrs. Hunter came in.

"Five o'clock, Eloise, and pitch dark. Are you practicing properly in the dark?"

"I know these lessons by heart, mamma," the girl answered in a low sweet voice, with a shade of weariness in the tone.

"Don't waste time, darling," the mother said anxiously, "you know I cannot pay for music lessons, and next year you must try to find scholars."

"I wish you would let me help you now," was the reply. "It seems wicked for me to be studying and practicing while you have so much care and work."

"You will help me soon. But I want you to be independent, Eloise. I may die, and you could not run this great house, but you could teach. Go up stairs now; the gentlemen will be coming in soon to dinner."

"Did the new boarder come last night?"

"Dr. Worthington? Yes, dear! Mr. Loring tells me he is a great physician, author of some medical books, and wonderfully skilful. He is well off, too!"

"Oh, mamma, if he could help that pain!"

"No, dear, no; we will not trouble him with our aches and pains. There, dear, run up stairs. I will send Maggie for you when I eat my dinner."

Then the parlor was empty, for Cyrus sauntered off to his own room, when Mrs. Hunter and her daughter were gone.

He was not many days an inmate of Mrs. Hunter's house before he discovered that it was not that lady's policy to parade her daughter; to her boarders. The girl lived like a nun, in her own room nearly all day, practicing at an hour when the gentlemen were away, and the few ladies lying down, or out.

Yet with his resolve in full force, Cyrus Worthington continued to see Eloise very frequently. He would bend his great dark eyes upon her face, and hold her fascinated for eyes by the eloquence with which he spoke of music, of poetry, of all the girlsoul worshipped. He drew from her the story of the pain her mother suffered around her heart, and delicately offered professional services, where his skill availed to bring relief, thus making one step by winning the gratitude of mother and child.

But while his own heart knew no more now than before the sweetness of love, he read in Eloise's eyes none of the emotion he hoped to kindle there. Heart-whole himself he had not been without conquests in his selfish life. Women had owned the magnetic power in his great dark eyes, his eloquence of voice; the winning eloquence of his tongue. Belles whose conquests were of well known number had let him read the love he wakened in their eyes, and duels had owned themselves beaten at their own game.

Yet this shy violet, this little recluse, liking him well, gave him no part in her heart. One word from Bert Loring, one glance of his blue eyes, would call up flying flushes to the fair cheeks all Cyrus Worthington's eloquence failed to bring there.

But Bert, though older than his friend, had been an unsuccessful man. A poet by the gift of God, he was almost a pauper by the non-appreciation of man. Just the finest patrimony kept him from actual want, but though he had a hall-room at Mrs. Hunter's, his boots were often shabby, his clothes well-worn, and his purse inevitably a pauper.

And Mrs. Hunter, seeing Dr. Worthington in her best rooms, prompt in payments, faultless in costume, with a certainty of $30,000, and a possibility of greater wealth in the practice of his profession, encouraged his attentions to Eloise frowning upon poor loving Bert, who, spite of his jests about his well-riddled heart, gave the young girl, true, loyal love.

It was the old, old story, and Eloise, torn by her final affection and her girl love, was growing pale and wan as the winter wore away. There was no coercion. Mrs. Hunter loved the only child of her heart too well for that; but loving her she could not give her to poverty and Bert Loring. And one day, when Bert pleaded his cause, she told him:

"Dr. Worthington asked me this morning to give him Eloise. I like you, Bert. You have a heart to set a saint, but we must think of the child above all. You know how dreamy, sensitive, and helpless Eloise is. You know that hard work would be slow murder for her. She lives in her music, her books."

"And her love! She loves me," interrupted poor Bert, a boy yet in many tender phases of his nature.

"You put it hastily."

"I put it truly. While I can keep this house up you are welcome to a home here, but any day it may die. These heart spasms mean a sudden death some day, Bert. Then where are you to take Eloise?"

"I will work for her."

"Work first, then, and woo her afterward. My poor Bert, you are too like her to marry her. Could I but give you wealth, you could live in a poet's paradise, you and Eloise, never growing old, two grown-up children. But we are all poor. Do not torture her, Bert; you who love her. Go away and let Dr. Worthington win her."

"She will never love him."

"Not if you are here!"

"I will go, then. You will let me tell her?"

"Why? It will only make her life harder, if she thinks you suffer. I will never force her to marry Dr. Worthington can win her, and you frankly, it will make me very happy."

So Bert, honest, loyal Bert, for his very love's sake, turned his face from his love and went to another city, where he was offered a position as assistant editor upon a magazine, that was to be a fortune in the future, but in the present was rather a log on the backs of the proprietors.

And Eloise, wondering at Bert's desertion, knew all the sunlight was gone from her life when he said farewell. There had been no secret in Bert's pairing with his friend. Frankly he had told mamma his hope, love, and despair, and pathetically implored him to cherish Eloise lovingly, if he could her love!

Even while he spoke, Cyrus Worthington knew that this love would never come to answer to his wooing. Less than one word of his could flood, warm, life with happiness, yet kept silence. In the days that followed, when he wooed the fair, pale girl, tenderly, devotedly, no pang of remorse wrung his heart, though he knew he trod carefully upon all loving flowers of hope on hers. He was a man who could have seen his own mother writhe in agony, if by her torture he could have wrung one new fact for science, and in the scheme of his life the happiness of a girl counted for less than nothing.

And while he courted the unwilling love patiently and gently, Mrs. Hunter, with her failing health, her pale face, and weary step, pleaded eloquently in her very silence. A home of rest for her mother was what Eloise had been promised in dear care words, that could not be regarded as a bribery.

"Our dear mother may live for years in a quiet house, but this constant care and toil are killing her!"

So little by little, wearing but the loving heart's constancy by steady perseverance, Cyrus Worthington won Eloise for his wife. She told him she did not love him, but knowing nothing of Bert's spoken love to her mother, she kept her maiden secret folded close in her loyal heart, and whispered nothing of her love for Bert. If on her wedding day her white, drawn face was corpse-like in its forced composure, what cared Cyrus Worthington for this? He had won his game.

Only one week after his wedding day, leaving Eloise with her mother, he wended his way to the office of a leading lawyer and asked for an interview.

"You were lawyers for Gervase Hunter?" he asked.

"We were."

"You are aware that he died in Paris last September?"

"We were not aware of that. Our business has not required correspondence since that time."

"I was his physician, and to me he committed the care of all his papers, his will included."

"Hm; making you his heir?"

"No, sir; making his nephew's only child heiress to his wealth—nearly a million, I understand."

"Nearly double that sum. You will leave the papers?"

"Assuredly, and Mrs. Hunter's address. Miss Hunter became my wife one week ago. I leave you the address of my assistant in Paris, the lawyer who drew up the will, and the witnesses; that you may ascertain that all is correct."

"A bold game," the lawyer muttered, "he has played his cards well."

And while he spoke there was a noise in the street, a rush of many feet, a clattering fall.

"A scaffolding on the next door house has given way," a clerk cried, with a white face, "and there are men killed. Nine or ten they say."

Nine or ten bricklayers, masons, carpenters and one gentleman who had been passing by, and in whose face the lawyer recognized the features of his late visitor.

Dead, with his scheme complete. Dead, with the road to his ambition, gold, strewn open before him. Dead, with his hands upon the wealth he had planned to win. Dead.

They carried him home to his young wife and tenderly broke the truth to her. Even in the first shock, she felt in her heart recoil when the lawyer told her of the errand completed two minutes before her husband's death. She had not loved him, but had she never known his baseness she could have mourned a kind friend lost. It was two years before Bert came to share her home, to be the husband of her heart, to fill the paradise her mother had painted. But in their happiness the change of situation never is spoken by the wife he deceived or the friend he wronged.

Cuticura

REMEDIES

Have achieved the most noted success of any Medicines of Modern Times.

Messrs. Weeks & Potter have never doubted the specific properties of CUTICURA, CUTICURA RESOLVENT and CUTICURA SOAP, for the speedy, permanent, and economical cure of Humors of the Blood, Skin, and Scalp. They are, however, astonished at their universal success, for it was to be expected that in the hands of some they would fail solely from inadequate or ignorant use of them.

They are enabled to say without fear of contradiction that no remedies ever achieved in the short space of one year the number of wonderful cures performed by the CUTICURA REMEDIES.

SALT RHEUM

LAW OFFICE OF CHAS. HOUGHTON,

MESSRS. WEEKS & POTTER, Gentlemen:—I feel it a duty to inform you, and through you all who are interested to know the fact, that a most distressing and obstinate case of Salt Rheum or Eczema, which has been under my personal observation from its first appearance to the present time—about ten (10) years—covering the greater portion of the patient's body and limbs with its peculiar irritating and itching sores, and to which all the known methods of treating such disease have been applied without benefit, has completely disappeared, leaving a clean and healthy skin, under a few days of profuse application of CUTICURA.

I can and do heartily advise all similarly afflicted to try the remedy which has been so effectual in this case.

Very truly yours,

CHAS. HOUGHTON.

LIVER COMPLAINT

Gentlemen:—I have had Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia, with running sores on the ends of my nose, for ten years. Doctors did me no good. I have been spring poisoned for 30 years and it did me good. It is doing the business, and I am going for it strong.

Yours truly,
